1. Two Russian battalions previously stationed at Rackar (sic) have now been deployed along the railroad between Divaccia and Vercovichi. Two Ukrainian battalions, previously at Circhina, have been transferred, one to Monte Porsena and the other to Monte Masic where they are engaging in mountain training maneuvers. Two additional battalions of Ukrainian troops are reported to have arrived at Circhina, commanded by Russian Lt. Col. Litvengo and Russian Maj. Ocorovaci. Allegedly, the units came from Hungary.
2. Fortification works are reported to be in progress in the region of Fontana del Conte. Aerial specialists from Celje have been added to those already at work in the Monte S. Vito region. The work that has been going on east of the Chiapovano cemetery is being finished. About 300 men are reported at work enlarging and strengthening the road leading to the open space east of Chiapovano. A number of German prisoners under the direction of one Giovanni Streiaszi from Codroipo (Udine) are employed reactivating the military telephone line running through Orscca, S. Giovanni and Raune di Circhina.
3. There are three military uniform factories which outfit the entire armed forces, one in Belgrade, one in Zagreb, and one in Ljubljana. The factory at Belgrade was damaged during the war and has been rebuilt partly with recovered machinery and partly with machinery furnished by UNRRA. Immediately after the war and during all of 1946, 800 Yugoslav military personnel, later replaced by 1,500 civilian workers, worked there. All washable uniforms are cut and sewn by machine. The textiles which arrive by train are furnished by UNRRA and by Russia, who in order to make up for the urgent need of the Yugoslav Armed Forces, send also uniforms already made. The average production is 1,000 uniforms daily. The workers are paid by the piece and their daily salary amounts to 150 dinars. The director of the factory, until recently, was a certain Maj. Desnica.
